Woodmeister Master Builders Earns Corporate Citizen of Year Award

(Holden, Mass.) Citing an innovative management style, generous community spirit, and dedication to its employees, Worcester Business Journal has named Woodmeister Master Builders of Holden 2007 Corporate Citizen of the Year. The award was presented at the 2007 Business Leaders of the Year event on February 21 at the Beechwood Inn in Worcester. Company founder and CEO Theodore Goodnow accepted the award and participated in a Business Leaders Panel on “The Changing Face of Leadership.”

The Business Leader of the Year Awards were sponsored and presented by Clark University’s Graduate School of Management. Other 2007 award winners are: Frederick H. Eppinger, The Hannover Insurance Group of Worcester (large business); Ann Gray, Fabrico, Inc. of Oxford (entrepreneur); Francis M. Saba, Milford Regional Healthcare System, Inc. of Milford (non-profit).

Experience the Difference of Collaboration and Craftsmanship

Founded in 1980, Woodmeister Master Builders is known nationwide for its luxury residential construction work, custom cabinetry and interiors, and lifestyle management services. Projected 2007 sales are $27 million for the 150-employee company.

Announcing the award in its January 18, 2007 issue, Worcester Business Journal emphasized four areas of corporate behavior in which Woodmeister excels: a progressive organizational style that features open book management and a four-tier, inclusive management structure; an employee culture that fosters professional development, leadership, and sense of well-being; a strong community presence that includes substantial contributions of time, talent, and financial gifts; and a commitment to environmental stewardship programs, including recycling, energy savings, and green construction practices.
